On December 6, 2013, former Mayor Greg Stanton appointed a Human Trafficking Task Force charged with developing recommendations on methods to raise awareness, approaches to discourage child trafficking and constructive policy changes to permanently protect children and adults in the greater Phoenix area from trafficking. Other elements of the task force charge are:

- Enhance regional law enforcement's ability to identify and rescue victims
- Work to prevent child sex trafficking, through training at hotels, airlines, airports and other venues. Specifically, training workers how to recognize the signs of trafficking, where to report suspected trafficking and how to connect victims with services.
- Provide support to state-level legislative efforts to end child trafficking
- Assure trafficking victims in crisis can find help
- Examine child safety best practices identified by prior host communities.
